Adrienne Maeser is an active-duty naval intelligence officer currently teaching the Introduction to Cyber Security course providing a technically focused introduction to the principles behind the use, function, and operation of computers, networks and applications with an emphasis on cyber security in the Cyber Science Department. Her military experience includes an operational tour with Carrier Air Wing SEVEN aboard the aircraft carrier USS EISENHOWER (2009-2011), working as an intelligence analyst at U.S. European Command Joint Analysis Center (JAC) Molesworth (2011-2014), serving as division officer (N2) for Commander Task Force FIVE SEVEN (CTF-57) in Manana, Bahrain (2014-2015). She was selected for a Navy graduate education program at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute (RPI) in Troy, New York (2015-2016) in Information Technology & Web Sciences (ITWS). Prior to joining USNA, she served as the intelligence chief (J2) for the USCYBERCOM Partner Engagements branch (2016-2017). Her latest position included the Military Aide-de-Camp to ADM Michael S. Rogers, USN & GEN Paul M. Nakasone, USA, Commander, United States Cyber Command (USCYBERCOM), Director, National Security Agency (NSA), Chief, Central Security Service (CSS) (2017-2019).

LCDR Maeser has been awarded the Joint Service Achievement Medal, Navy Commendation, Defense Meritorious Service Medal, and various Achievement Medals.